Teaching Good Citizenship

Being a good citizen encompasses many different aspects of good character. Rightfully so since most of us are citizens in multiple settings. Think about the groups you belong to: family, school, church, clubs, community etc. The list goes on and on!
How we conduct ourselves indicates what kind of citizen we are in these settings. Good Citizenship involves honesty, reliability, and responsibility. Parents and teachers are tasked with the responsibility of modeling good citizenship since that is the best way to raise good citizens! So how do we do this? Here are a few ideas:

- Show love for our country by discussing laws and their importance
- Follow the rules and stress the importance of doing so
- Stress the importance of doing the right thing even when it is difficult
- Share a story about how our country was founded and the great sacrifice involved
- Celebrate Veteran's Day and explain what it means

Tips for School Success

- Make sure your child follows the classroom rules and practices good digital citizenship.
- Use your resources! Encourage your child to attend class time for collaborative learning.
- Set aside a designated area for completing school work and be sure to keep all your work in one place.
